READ THIS!
I want an energetic man to canvass each County in the United States and Canada, and sell some new Historical, Biographical, and Literary Books, and finely executed Maps.
These works are sold exclusively by my own Agents, and are never placed in Book Stores for sale.
Since February 4th I have sent out 166 men to operate for these works, and "will there is room." If you want a profitable employment, and at the same time an honorable calling, send me your address, and I will mail you, free of postage, my catalogue, terms to Agents, and the actual reports of some of my men who are at work, and leave you to decide if you, too, may not make this business both agreeable and profitable. I am offering unusual inducements to stop-

WEEKLY YEOMAN.—We will furnish the Weekly Yeoman during the session of the Legislature at 75 cents the single copy, or ten copies for $5. The Weekly will contain a full synopsis of each day's proceedings, besides all the current news of the day.

METCALFE'S REPORTS.—The first volume of Metcalfe's Reports of decisions of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky is bound and ready for delivery, and may be had of the Reporter or at either of the book stores in Frankfort. Price $5 per volume. Persons wishing a volume sent by mail may remit the price and it will be forwarded postage paid. au23 f

TO LAWYERS.—Our facilities for job printing are equal to any office in the West, and we are prepared to do all kinds of job work at the shortest notice. Lawyers' briefs, legal cards, blanks, &c., printed in the neatest styles and at prices as low as they can be done anywhere.

SPECIAL TRAIN.—We are requested by Mr. Kytz, the agent in this city, to state that the special train to convey the members of the Legislature and invited guests to Louisville, will leave this city at 1:40 P. M., this day.

☞ The telegraph reports the Hon. Clark B. Cochran, of New York, insane and removed to the Utica Asylum. The cause of his insanity is said to be excitement regarding the new organization of Congress. Mr. Cochran is a Republican, and has represented the Sixteenth District of his State. There are two Cochranes in Congress from New York. John Cochran is a Democrat, and represents one of the New York City Districts—the Sixth.

POSTMASTER ARRESTED.—A few days since, Deputy U. S. Marshal G. H. Jett arrested Mr. T. J. Beachamp, Deputy Postmaster at Adairsville, in Logan county, Ky., near the Tennessee line, on the charge of robbing the mail. Mr. Jett arrived in this city on Friday with the prisoner in charge.

SHAKESPEARE ON DRESS.—Shakespeare, who, according to a western editor, was a writer of no little ability and of considerable originality, says, very sagaciously, that "the apparel of proclaims the man." This fact is undeniable, and had the great poet flourished two hundred and seventy-five years later, he would, doubtless, have made old Polonius go a step further, and advise his son to purchase all his apparel only at No. 4 Masonic Temple, Louisville. Mr. Swain has an excellent assortment of tailoring and gentlemen's furnishing goods as can be found in the city, and he is prepared to furnish everything in his line.

☞ In relation to the visit of the Legislature of Kentucky and Tennessee to Cincinnati, the Enquirer says:

Our people will extend a most hearty and cordial welcome to our distinguished guests from Tennessee and Kentucky.
Our Legislature will, we are confident, respond to this movement in a patriotic spirit, and make the proper arrangements for their reception. Let an appropriation be made from the State Treasury to defray the necessary expenses of the entertainment, which should be one worthy of the grand and glorious meeting of the representatives of the sovereignty of three of the most powerful States in the Union.

☞ In the Louisville Democrat of the 19th, L. F. Sanders, in a labored article, attempts to justify his course in casting the vote of Carroll county in the late convention for the Graves administration, which was rejected. He deals largely in fulsome laudations of Douglas, which no Democrat objects to. We think the writer shows a sour spirit. Whilst growing so eloquent over the harmony of the Democracy, did he not suppose that his setting himself up as a candidate, in opposition to the regular nominee, last summer, would sound strangely on the ears of the Democracy of Carroll county? He was sadly beaten in the race for the Legislature, by Col. Hitt; the Democracy repudiated him and his heresies. But he determined to revenge himself! If he did not succeed in misrepresenting the county in the Legislature, he certainly did in the Convention. Modest man!—Newcastle Democrat.

LEGAL ADVERTISING.—Most of our Kentucky contemporaries are urging the Legislature to pass a law requiring the advertisement in the newspapers of all judicial sales and other official notices proper to be given to the public. Such advertising is not necessary to the support of our property, and the passage of the proposed law would be of no very great pecuniary advantage to us. We hope, therefore, we will not be regarded as urging a law for our own special advantage when we say that, in our opinion, the interest of litigants demand the legislation proposed. Individual, when they have anything to sell, advertise it as widely as possible, and find their advantage in it, and what is good for individuals, acting for themselves, would be good for them when the courts and its officers are disposing of their property for them. It is, unquestionably, a most penny-wise economy to deprive the debtor, whose property is in the hands of the law, of the advantages of publicity in the sale of it, merely because of the trifling advertisement would cost.

Paris, (Ky.) Citizen.

Reorganization of the Militia.

Amongst the highest duties which government owes to society, and which is proclaimed in express terms by the constitution, is the duty "to provide for the common defense."

If it is an obligation at all times, there are moments when it becomes imperative in so high a degree that its neglect involves even criminality on the part of government. The importance of a high degree of preparation for any contingencies that may arise is fully recognized and set forth in the annual message of Governor Magoffin. He says:

"A thorough reorganization of the militia system of the Commonwealth is also recommended. Under our laws upon the subject there is no enrollment of the militia of the State, in consequence of which we do not receive half the quota of arms from the government we are annually entitled to. In case of insurrection, the enforcement of the laws by the executive, the suppression of mobs, or protection from internal or external danger, there is scarcely a single volunteer company which could be called into service. The existing laws should be repealed; volunteer companies should be formed in every county of the State; regular drills should be required; an encampment of several days in each district should be annually appointed by law; the martial spirit of our people should be revived, and a thorough reorganization of the militia, connected with the volunteer system, should be effected. Threatening dangers and a sense of security require it."

A bill embodying the recommendations of the Executive has been drawn up and reported in the House of Representatives; and it is understood that its chief provisions meet also with the approval of the Military committee of the Senate. It is designed to supersede the impracticable system which is now on our statute books, and which has tended through a series of years to repress every thing that might seem like military enthusiasm within the borders of our State.

The bill now before the Legislature is intended, firstly, to cause a perfect enrollment of the whole body of the militia, and its organization in such a form as to constitute a system of Reserves on which the State may call in times of danger; and,

Secondly, to bring into existence a purely volunteer force under such rules as will insure its efficient instruction, and direct the military ardor of our young men into channels which will enable their enthusiasm to redound to the service of the State.

The perfect enrollment of the militia is attained in the simplest possible manner through the intervention of the assessors, who make a return annually through the county clerks to the Adjutant-General of the State, who reports from these returns the strength of the militia of the State. On this report is based the issue of arms made by the United States.

The necessity of a more perfect enrollment than can be made under our existing laws is apparent from the following facts. The State of Massachusetts, whose population does not materially differ from that of Kentucky, returned to the Adjutant-General of the Army, for the year 1859, as the aggregate of their enrolled militia, 157,568 men. The last return from Kentucky was in 1852, when the aggregate was reported as only 88,979. The new State of Michigan returns 97,094 militiamen. Missouri returns 118,047, though her population is far less than our own. Even the little State of New Jersey reports 81,984.

The loss resulting to the State within the last ten years, from the want of a sufficient enrollment, is probably not less than five thousand muskets, sufficient for a small army. The value of the arms thus lost to the State is not less than $50,000. The proposed bill provides an effectual and simple remedy for the future; securing to us even during the present year, a comparatively full enrollment.

It also secures, in a manner which will give no additional inconvenience to voters, the election, during the present year, in every county in the State, of officers whose duty it is made to organize, at once, the enrolled militia of their respective counties into the proper companies, battalions, and regiments. The Colonel of every county is chosen at the regular annual elections by the enrolled militia of his county, under such rules that the office can never remain long vacant; and after election, he is placed, at once, in direct communication with the Commander-in-Chief, from whom he receives his instructions without having to resort to the routine of a "circumlocution of office." The bill, in every respect, is based on the simplest military principles, and the details which accompany it will be found, on a careful investigation, to point directly to a practical end.

In the words of the Constitution, "a well-regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free State," it is incumbent upon our government to place it in a condition of efficiency. This requires not only that it should go through the forms of an organization, but that it should be properly armed. The United States law, and the existing militia law of this State, have provided that every man subject to enrollment, shall provide himself with suitable arms to take part in the defense of the State. The theory of the law now proposed recognizes the right which is every where asserted and exercised, that every government is entitled, for the protection and safety of the State, to claim the services of all of its citizens who are capable of bearing arms. All our military laws are based on the same incontrovertible principle. If the citizen, when called upon, fails to fulfill his military obligations to society, by arming himself for the common safety, it is the right and the duty of the State to require from such citizen a sum which would be a fair interest on the cost of the arms he is required to provide, and on any incidental expenditures which might result to the State from the absence, or neglect of the citizen. It is the duty of the State to collect such a sum, in order that it may provide arms and means of defense in some other way; and that the neglect of its citizens to provide means of protection shall not leave the State in a condition of helpless disarmament.

The bill now proposed is more liberal in its provisions in this respect than any which have heretofore existed on our statute book. It fixes the military commutation in lieu of military service on the part of the enrolled militia at the lowest interest on the expenses which would attend their armament, requiring each militiaman, when absent from a muster, to pay only twenty or thirty cents, or something more than one dollar per year; and it leaves it optional with every man to fulfill his duty to the State, either by mustering with the required arms, or by paying this small fine in lieu of such service. The fines which may be assessed in similar cases by our present laws, if enforced, would be not less than six dollars nor more than eighteen dollars per year for each man; a tax which would be onerous in the extreme if enforced; and on such occasions as its collection has been enforced, it has been expended without any resulting good to the State.

The new bill, however, proposes, in the first place, that the fines shall be so small that they will fall lightly on the delinquents; and secondly, that they shall be collected in the same manner as other taxes, so as to insure their payment into the State treasury as a fund to provide for the common defense, by the purchase of arms, and the transportation, arming, and subsistence of troops in the service of the State. Every guard is thrown around this fund, with a view to limit its expenditure to the sacred purposes for which it is designed.

It is thought that the bill provides for a more complete enrollment and organization of the entire body of the militia than has ever existed in our State, and that the mode pursued to accomplish so desirable an end is as direct and simple as could be employed. The force thus organized will constitute an immense unarmed reserve, from which, in times of danger, draughts may be made, or volunteers received for the protection of the State. But a mass of unwieldy and ill-disciplined will not be sufficient for the wants of the State in any sudden emergency. It must have a nucleus around which it can gather, and reduce its unwieldy masses into elements of order. The lessons of history teach us that something more than individual courage is necessary to military efficiency. The words of Washington, whose wise maxim, "in time of peace prepare for war," we have so entirely neglected, should not fall unheeded upon our ears. In a letter to the President of Congress on the subject of the militia as they appeared, suddenly taken, without preparation, from their homes, he uses these words:

"No militia will ever acquire the habits necessary to resist a regular force. Even those nearest to the seat of war are only valuable as light troops to be scattered in the woods, and harass, rather than do a serious injury to the enemy. The firmness requisite for the real business of fighting is only to be attained by a constant course of discipline and service. I have never yet been witness to a single instance that can justify a different opinion; and it is most earnestly to be wished, that the liberties of America may no longer be trusted, in any material degree, to so precarious a dependence. I cannot but remark that it gives me pain to find the measures pursuing at the southward still turn upon accumulating large bodies of militia, instead of once for all making a decided effort to have a permanent force. In my ideas of the true system of war at the southward, the object ought to be to have a good army rather than a large one."

Our own history is not without its lessons to Kentuckians. At New Orleans our militia was divided. That portion under Jackson behaved with the steadiness of veterans. Not only were they behind breastworks, but they were supported by the example of 884 veteran regular troops, and Major Plandie's battalion of uniformed volunteers, numbering 287 men, and the regular as well as the Barratarian Artillery. This force served as a nucleus around which the militia gathered with confidence, and whose example they worthily imitated. But how different was the conduct of the militia on the opposite bank! One company is alone reported to have behaved with steadiness, and that was a uniformed volunteer company of Artillery from New Orleans, and the only volunteer company on that side of the river. The courage of its members was directed by discipline, and it retained its reputation while all around it were flying.

Could more powerful reasons for an efficient organization of the volunteer system be urged than the following words addressed by General Jackson to the troops on the right bank after their defeat. He says:

"I will spare your feelings and my own by entering into no detail on the subject; to all who reflect, it must be a source of eternal regret, that a few moments exertion of that courage you certainly possess, was alone wanting to have rendered your success more complete than that of your fellow-citizens in the camp, by the defeat of the detachment which was rash enough to cross the river to attack you. To what cause was the abandonment of your lines owing? * * * The want of discipline, the want of order, a total disregard to obedience, and a spirit of insubordination, not less destructive than cowardice itself. This appears to be the cause which led to the disasters, and these causes must be eradicated, or I must cease to command. * * * But remember, that without obedience, without order, without discipline, all your efforts are vain; and the brave man, intemperate to his duty, is worth little more to his country than the coward who deserts her in the hour of danger."

The proper method of directing that courage which exists amongst us into useful channels, is to organize a volunteer system which will give us at all times, not an unruly mob, with arms in its hands, but a disciplined and well instructed force, ready at any moment to respond to the call of the State, and to endure whatever shock may await it, while the reserves shall be arming and gathering around it.

The bill now before the House proposes to accomplish that object. It is framed, not alone with reference to a condition of peace, but to a state of war. Proper officers are provided to insure its instruction. It can be assembled for purposes of encampment; and whenever it is assembled by the order of the Governor, in time of insurrection or other public danger, its movements are not crippled, and the troops are not left to the chances of starvation until the Legislature can assemble and pass an act for their relief, but the whole machinery necessary to move and to sustain the troops is called into existence at the moment it is wanted.

It is considered eminently just that citizens who thus voluntarily place themselves at the service of the State should be relieved from certain civic duties, as jury duty and working on public roads; and that the counties for whose defense they volunteer should provide the armories where they may assemble for instruction.

But it is equally the duty of the State to provide for a system of discipline which will maintain perfect order amongst a body of men who thus voluntarily come forward and offer their services in its defense.

These objects are sought to be attained by authorizing every company to adopt a constitution and by-laws, by means of which, in time of peace, the company can ordinarily enforce discipline through its own civil organization; and by authorizing a system of courts martial so complete, that in camps of instruction and in time of war, every command, however small, will have within itself the elements calculated to maintain order and discipline. It must be borne in mind, however, that in an organization where the officers are elect, public opinion will modify any system of discipline, and prevent its running into severity, if it does not impair its efficiency; but there are in the system itself sufficient checks against abuse of authority.

It is well known that all arms now issued are soon virtually lost to the State. The bill proposes to check so wasteful and needless a loss of what cannot well be spared. It is eminently just that a county for whose benefit the State issues its arms should be responsible for their being safely kept for the purposes for which they were issued. When a County Judge gives his sanction to the arming of a company, it is with the understanding that such a company is needed to protect life and property in the county. The arms are therefore charged to the county; and the value of any deficiency of arms must be paid to the State, and expended in the purchase of other arms. The County Judge can protect the county from loss by requiring bonds from those who use the arms.

The military fund derived from the commutation tax of the enrolled militia, is set apart to purchase arms and munitions of war; to provide camp equipment and other equipments necessary to prepare the active force for taking the field at any moment; and for other purposes of a like nature inuring exclusively to the general defense of the State. None of this fund can be used without the sanction of the Governor.

There is another class of military funds, arising from fines assessed by the different companies, and by courts martial on the members of the active force. These have nothing to do with the general fund, but are expended for exclusively military purposes, by councils of administration of the different companies and regiments to which the funds belong.

A close study of the details of the bill will show that its provisions are all directed to a practical end. Much that may seem difficult of execution now, when the troops are necessarily dispersed, will be both easy and necessary of performance in time of active service; and it is needless to urge on intelligent men that a military force should be organized with reference to its efficiency in time of war, rather than in time of peace. We wish a force of volunteers which, when the hour of danger comes, will not break apart like a rope of sand, but which, by the bonds of patriotism and discipline, will be knit together "with cables of perdurable toughness." The "Kentucky State Guard" is considered exclusively a light corps. The Infantry movements which it is proposed to adopt, are similar to those which have given so terrible a renown to the Zouaves of the French army. The name of the Guard will be attractive to every citizen; and the colors under which they will march are those of the Union, with which, in intimate association, will appear the arms of the State.—What stronger motive to discipline and united exertions could be offered to a volunteer of the Guard than to place constantly in his view, emblazoned on the colors which are displayed above him, that truly military motto, "United we stand, divided we fall?"

CITIZEN.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 20, 1860.

Remarks of Mr. WM. JOHNSON, of Scott, made in the House of Representatives, January 20, 1860, upon the resolution appropriating $10,000 to the completion of the Clay Monument.

Mr. JOHNSON said:
Mr. SPEAKER: I had the honor to introduce the joint resolution which is now under consideration, appropriating the sum of ten thousand dollars towards the completion of the monument now being erected at Lexington, to the memory of Henry Clay. I wish to inform the House that upon the presentation of the accounts of the Monument Association, I find that the sum of $50,119.94 has been expended, and that the sum estimated to be necessary for the completion of the work, including steps, paving, balustrading, &c., is $24,335. The resources of the Association, including uncollected subscriptions, bills receivable, &c., amount to $7,903.80, leaving as the balance yet to be raised, $16,491.20. If the State should make the appropriation asked, there will still remain $6,491.20, to be obtained by private subscriptions. Henry Clay, the great statesman, to whose memory this noble tribute is to be devoted, came to Kentucky in 1797, to use his own touching language, "an orphan boy and penniless." In 1803, he was elected to the Legislature for the first time, and at once assumed the exalted rank for which nature had destined him, as the great political leader of Kentucky, which position, sustained by the matchless power of his genius, he steadily maintained till the close of his great career, on the 20th June, 1852. No higher proof could be presented of the real greatness of his character than that he should have achieved and sustained this rare pre-eminence amidst so many difficulties.

For the first half of his political life he was the acknowledged leader of the Democracy, and for the latter half of the party which stood in opposition to the Democracy. During nearly the whole of this long period, he was sustained by a large majority of the people of Kentucky. But in the last great struggle of his life, he rallied around him the true and patriotic men of every party, in calming the stormy elements of faction by the great compromise measures of 1850, which settled for the time the agitating questions that threatened the dismemberment of our glorious Union. The rancor of party ceased, and the hearts of all true men were attracted to the statesman, whose noble efforts were devoted to the good of our common country, and now all parties claim him as their own. All unite in honoring the man who thus forgot the ties of party, and devoted the last and mightiest efforts of his genius to his country and to the perpetuation of the institutions which had been achieved for us by the blood of the patriots of the revolution. And now, when his mortal remains sleep beneath the sod of his loved and adopted Commonwealth, we will all unite and pay this noble tribute to his patriotism, his genius, and his worth.

The monument which is being erected at Lexington, as a work of art stands without a rival in this country. To use the language of another, "it is a noble memorial of the national gratitude, worthy of Kentucky, worthy of her gallant people, and worthy of the illustrious patriot, whose fame and noble civic achievements it commemorates."

RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. ALEXANDER moved the following resolution, which was adopted, viz:

WHEREAS, It having been represented to the resident and visiting ladies of this city, that their presence has, upon several occasions, caused a premature adjournment of this House; therefore,

Resolved, That such representation was unfounded, and that we cordially invite them to our deliberations, believing, as we do, that their presence is always powerful for good under any and all circumstances.

Mr. RIDDELL moved that the following resolution, which was adopted, viz:

Resolved, That, as the law recognizes no such thing as a marriage between a free person and a slave, the committee on Religion be directed to inquire into the expediency of preventing such persons of such status, cohabiting as man and wife, and report by bill or otherwise.

Mr. ARMSTRONG offered the following resolution, which was adopted, viz:

Resolved, That the rule of this House, requiring leave to be obtained previous to introducing bills, be, and is hereby, suspended during the remainder of the session; and upon the call of counties hereafter, the presentation of bills and resolutions shall be in order, and the same shall be referred to the appropriate committees, unless the House order otherwise.

This resolution to take effect from and after the 27th inst.

Mr. LUTTRELL moved the following resolution, which was adopted, viz:

Resolved, That the committee on the Judiciary are hereby instructed to inquire into what legislation, if any, is necessary to prevent the writing, printing, or circulating of any book, paper, or other thing, with intent to advise or incite negroes in this State to rebel, or make insurrection, or incite resistance to the rights of property of masters in their slaves, and that they report by bill or otherwise.

Mr. LEACH moved the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That a special committee consisting of five members of this House be appointed to inquire by the examination of witnesses, and such other legal method as they may choose to adopt, into the conduct of the Circuit Judges of this Commonwealth, and to report the facts to this House, and their opinion, whether the defect in the administration of justice arises from the nature of the judicial system, the want of legal abilities and qualifications of the Judges, or their habits in life, and report the name or names of such Judge or Judges with the facts.
